

Use your right to know about the most harmful chemicals in consumer products!

A new chemicals law in Europe called REACH has given European consumers the “right to know” about the most harmful chemicals in consumer products by obliging companies to give information at no charge when asked. This right can help consumers make better informed choices about their purchases, and how to use the product. By asking, you will show companies that you prefer to buy safer products.

More information about this campaign, to which ANEC signed up, can be found on <http://www.chemicalshealthmonitor.org/spip.php?rubrique111>